CSS is as follows table.main-table { margin-right:auto; margin-left:auto; width:100%; height:100%; } table.main-table th { font-size:12px; border: 1px solid #666666; } table.main-table td { font-size:9px; border: 1px solid #666666; } This works fine on all of my browsers except the iPad. It appears to have an issue with the width of the item being larger than the fixed container. My question is, how do I have a table that looks how I have it above on the iPad, not in split mode. I can't get it to line up right next to the other cells as it appears to have a "longer" height. I would appreciate any help on this matter. A: if you create a smaller version for the iPad you may be able to leave out the margin & width properties.
