I've already asked a question about calculating the number of paths through a graph in this post, and someone gave me a really nice answer. I noticed though that my graph may be a little more complex. In this graph, there are two starting points A and B. There are two possible paths between A and B. There is a way to write the numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 by following the edges but one must stay on the graph. The question was how to write the numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 given the fact that I'm not allowed to use anything other than the edge to connect to. Also, some numbers were excluded since we cannot write a sequence that includes them. There is no need to have a solution in pseudocode since this is just a question I made up. A: If A is in a cycle (the path between A and B is only consisting of A), then you can mark it as unknown. Then you loop through the other nodes and try to combine the marked nodes into a path. When you are done, all the paths must include the starting points and the number of paths is your answer. Algorithm: def path_numbers(G, start, end, paths) paths = [] tmp_mark = [start] while not tmp_mark == [end] current = tmp_mark new_mark = [] current = nodes(G).find_all(n -> n.is_cycle) for n in current if n.mark != '?' new_mark 3da54e8ca3
