The two countries have a bilateral trade agreement which is the union's third-largest trading partner in the Nordic region. The FTAs are usually set by the EU and then enter into force for the member states. The trade agreement between the EU and Faroe Islands is called EFTA — the European Free Trade Association. The EFTA treaty was established in 1960 and is based on the earlier treaty with Iceland which is also known as the EEC. Like the EU's trade agreement with Iceland, the EFTA treaty set up a special mechanism for settling disputes between the parties. The EFTA mechanism is based on the EU's Article 218.2. It says: "Parties shall each give their consent to the establishment of procedures for the settlement of disputes arising out of the agreement which are not covered by the ordinary dispute settlement mechanisms." This refers to the rules that are set up by the EU in Article 218.2, that countries can agree in the agreement to settle any disputes in a special way through the EU. In the EFTA treaty that mechanism is called the "General Conditions for settling disputes" and is based on Article 218.2. The EFTA treaty also contains a mechanism to resolve disputes between the countries on a bilateral basis. The EFTA treaty says: "Parties shall make separate agreements to that effect, which shall enter into force as from the date of signature." This is based on Article 17.1 of the EEA Treaty. There are eight countries in the EFTA — the eight members of the European Free Trade Association (EFTA). Among the current EFTA members are Norway, Iceland, Liechtenstein, Switzerland, and the three states of EFTA itself — Norway, Switzerland and Iceland. The European Free Trade Association is part of the EU's
