What's new in Elden Ring:

See you in the true lands between!!

I missed this last year. It will now be a part of the game. A post from Nexon regarding Palladion:

"We are happy to announce that the relaunch of Palladion is planned to start this September. This exciting role-playing game is an epic saga that will take players to the world of Garos, thousands of years into the future, and casts you into the role of one of the last of the Garos army heroes. Players will follow the story of several characters that begin their journey as common humans and are launched into the most critical and critical events of their lives. In order to survive in this world, they must leave their past behind and create new destinies and take a strong stance against the evil group that has emerged. To protect their homeland, they will plunge into the forest of Garos and fight the enemy, leader by leader, as a last hope for their destroyed world."

It's looking pretty solid. I'm looking forward to it. Will probably get it when I start the game (I'm likely to keep gaming through the summer or QA as I'll be mostly idle) but I look forward to trying it out for myself if I'm not sick into it. Good to get a look at this game.

OVERLORD MMORPG V2.1 FIXED

My original MMO patch, MMOG, was out for this game as an update. That post is pretty old (I think I was one of the few to report a problem), and one of the OMM2 devs came up with a fix for me.

'False innocence' Articles Yet another study demonstrates that, in the future, global warming will cause the oceans to become acidified, and that higher levels of acidification will damage the shells of sea creatures. A research team led by University of California, San Diego, postdoctoral researcher Wendy Leung measured the amount of carbon dioxide in various seas in 2004. The concentration of carbon dioxide in the ocean rose substantially from the 1980s to the early 2000s. The researchers then found that the amount of carbonic acid, a by-product of carbon dioxide dissolving in the oceans, increased by about 5 percent in the North Atlantic, the East Pacific, and in the North Indian Ocean. They also confirmed that in the North Atlantic, carbon dioxide concentrations in the surface waters exceeded those in the ocean at depths greater than two hundred metres. Acidified oceans are particularly harmful to sea creatures because they lower the pH of the water. This lowers the level at which certain metals become soluble and makes them unavailable to shell-forming organisms. In the study, first published in Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences on May 2, 2004, marine shell-creatures were the most sensitive to the effects of carbonic acid pollution, especially in areas where temperatures warm, but the most important threat was acidification in the Arctic, Leung said. Other studies have concluded that as the oceans warm, they are losing their ability to absorb carbon dioxide. The oceans are becoming less able to buffer the Earth's climate from carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases because they are becoming more acidic and less alkaline. According to Leung, this process is occurring at a faster rate at greater depths. The team's study, however, looked at the level of carbon dioxide at the surface. When the oceans become too acidic, the shell-creatures will get weaker and be more susceptible

Lighting fixtures that use HID (High Intensity Discharge) bulbs such as high-output table and floor lamps may use emitter technology such as Nichrome. Nichrome emitter technology has high efficacy (efficacy refers to the amount of light produced per electric (or lumens per watt)) that is desirable and the temperature performance and color rendition that is acceptable. Nichrome emitter technology, however, has a limited life from about 1000 hours to about 2000 hours and tends to grow yellowish and not look at all its best after around 1000 hours (about 14 days). Over time, the emitter lamp body will discolor from the heated bulb to become brittle and prone to cracks. As a result, the efficiency of the Nichrome emitter may be reduced. Thus, after about two years of usage, the Nichrome emitter will begin to show signs of growing red with a dark red hue. The bulbs will still light, but the light is of diminished performance and from the darker red appearance, the emitter will look less than good. As the Nichrome emitter gets older and gets more yellow, the efficiency will drop and reduce the light output further. Thus, the Nichrome bulb will have a shorter life cycle than its discoloring. Traditional means of extending the life cycle of Nichrome
