The unique combination of real-world data, alongside the use of advanced physics and AI, resulted in an all-new football match experience. The real-world data is captured in the form of goal celebrations, players' gait, skills, tackles and much more. Players receive feedback on their performance via audio callouts and graphical player overlays on the screen. Realistic collisions and damage are supported across the pitch, while new player injury behaviors can impact play. FIFA 21 also introduced a new, timed, sprinting ability, known as "Jebediah," that enables the player to make harder runs, and to go one-on-one with an opponent, rather than relying on triangulation. New 'Press' difficulty mode for FIFA 21 allows the player to feel the ball between their feet, becoming more comfortable on the ball and becoming adept at dribbling and short, one-touch passes. The engine has been rebuilt from the ground-up to deliver a more authentic experience. Players are now able to dodge more effectively to avoid tackles, while they can now hear the feedback and experience the changes in the environment during gameplay. FIFA 21 introduced "referee animations" that give the referee a distinctive look that matches the appearance of real people. Additionally, FIFA 21 introduced a number of other minor tweaks and improvements to the FIFA franchise, such as "Move Goal Camera Mode," where the camera follows the ball in the main menu. FIFA 19 introduced a series of new gameplay features, including a new "Agent Eye" feature that improves player footwork and ball movement, a new free-kick feature, and new animations for shots and volleys. Both FIFA 19 and FIFA 22 feature a variety of smart, reactive gameplay and player intelligence features, including: FIFA 19 introduced a number of smart, reactive player intelligence features: Position Select, Player Trajectory, Player Weight, Player Readiness and Player Requesting Dribbles. Position Select allows you to select your attacking player within the field, Player Trajectory leverages player positioning, such as running a player behind the last defender, to manipulate pass options, Player Weight detects which player is nearest the ball to make accurate decisions and Player Readiness allows the player to request a pass or dribble by tapping. Additionally, FIFA 19 introduced a new "Player Activity Based Movement" control
