A: The dot com status of this website is terrible as you can read from this screenshot of their site on Google's page speed insights tool. This may be the reason for the high bounce rate. Johannesburg - Four people have been arrested, a bank has been robbed, a TV station has been destroyed, and, ahem, an entire building is on fire in Khayelitsha. The latest incident comes after a series of violent crime incidents, including an alleged murder that left five female private security guards dead near Tshepiso's Botswana village. Among other things, the alleged murder was allegedly carried out by a gang of armed township residents. The gang has been arrested and guns and ammunition have been seized. Also read: Drought leaves men, women pregnant in Tshepiso Other arrests have been made in the past week, including the arrest of eight men last Monday - some reportedly on charges of violating a court order by allegedly beating a 15-year-old boy. During a raid on their home, a TV station transmitter was allegedly destroyed, resulting in a cable being cut. The police yesterday told media houses that they were working with the MEC for Transport, the media, and of roads to find the perpetrators of the station's destruction. Members of the 8th U.S. Congress are lobbying for American interests in France, the United Kingdom and other countries, including organizing trips to Paris and Westminster, London. The Washington Examiner obtained a Freedom of Information Act request — which was sent to all former House members, the Office of the Clerk of the House and the House Committee on

Administration — asking for details on their international travel in August. Questions about former members' travel appear to be an oversight by the Congressional Archives. Former Republican Rep. Doug Jones, who lost to Republican Roy Moore in last year's special election for a Senate seat, appears to be the only former senator who has not answered the request. Republican Rep. Chris Collins, who was recently charged in the

Q: Thread safeness to write to file without locks I need to write something like void writeToFile(string path, string stringData) { using (FileStream fs = new FileStream(path, FileMode.Append, FileAccess.Write, FileShare.Read)) using (BinaryWriter bw = new BinaryWriter(fs)) { bw.Write(stringData); } } Is this code correct? A: Yes, this will work because each of your streams have FileShare.Read so each stream will be able to read the file while the other stream is writing. You could carry your current pregnancy to term, or terminate your pregnancy using an abortion pill. However, you should always seek medical advice on the procedure you choose to terminate your pregnancy, and you should know that there are serious health risks associated with the pills used to induce abortion. We have explored the risks and health implications of inducing abortion using abortion pills, and the risks of carrying a pregnancy to term or terminating it later, at a time when the fetus is at a less developed stage of development than later in pregnancy. Inducing Abortion Pills Inducing abortion with pills has become much easier since the advent of RU486. However, before considering using an abortion pill, you need to make sure that you really want to terminate your pregnancy, and that you have the means to do so. As an alternative, you might consider carrying a pregnancy to term and having a birth at a later date, and choosing a more appropriate time to carry a pregnancy to term. If you choose to terminate a pregnancy, you will need to plan carefully ahead of the procedure, and make sure that you only have safe medical support with you. Safety Of Abortion Pill - The risks of inducing abortion with pills are well established, as many people have experienced these risks when they took the abortion pill. Potential risks include cramping, bleeding, medical complications, and changes in bleeding patterns. Many of the side effects and risks that people experienced are associated with the methods used to induce abortion. The pregnancy has been terminated before implantation (and the risk of ectopic pregnancy), rather than after implantation (and the risk of a molar pregnancy). These are not theoretical risks, but real risks to

What's new:

An immersive virtual reality experience of the Original Trilogy space farce. Project Details A cinematic VR Star Wars experience designed to take the player to the distant city of The Citadel, only to be abandoned, left abandoned. A dark wasteland waiting for The Empire to return as they did in the fabled Original trilogy. You will discover the secrets of the abandoned city while aboard the winged flying droid. The Great Machine, as sought, lies beyond, perpetually powered and waiting for The Empire to return. Created for New VRX season in 2018, Season 2. Character Design The man behind the Great machine, once an Imperial scientist, a being of pure technological genius. Now superseded in mental power, this machine, The Great Machine, lies inert, singing a song of purpose, keeping the Citadel frozen in time. Wasted in space, it remains eternally power and questions, for the dreams of the creators left behind long ago. The project included the design of The Great Machine, plus a number of other characters, including the droid. Particles, light and sound design A particle system to suggest a material presence was used, the light added the mystery and the overpass is one of the most impressive effects yet created in VRX. Skinning, rigging & animation Skinned particles could be found throughout the scene, skinning the player's avatar was made possible thanks to the amazing coding skills of Jeremy Meyer. The experienced team of animators left behind the outcome of a scene showing a scene on the bridge of the YT-2400 Freighter as seen above. The project generated an extensive amount of experience in creating and rigging the avatars, using characters from the original 1977 classic. Content creation & post-production Content creation for the project began in January 2016. One area of focus was a live action background that was shot during the creation process, to be used for polishing. Post-production lasted all the way up until the end of New VRX 2018. A room that played out across multiple scenes. The room was detailed to suggest, to the player, a recon room on the YT-2400 Freighter as seen above. Player interaction & UI design The UI, or control layout, for The Project include the following: Mouselook, easily adjustable and the ability to operate just by touching your device in front of you (Rough HMD tracking).
