How to fix "Windows could not install a device driver" error on Windows 10 or 8.1: Open Device Manager Open your computer software's control panel Select Hardware and Sound Select Device Manager from the menu Right-click the missing driver, and click Update Driver Software Choose Run Select the Most Current Driver tab, and click Update Driver Restart your computer, and you should be all set. Alternatively you can restart your computer, then try and connect to other devices you want to use, and they should all be fine. Windows 10 not detecting secure boot. Download and install a Windows 10 driver(s) The secure boot is not selected by default. You should select the option for "on" in the BIOS. You can search for a possible existing BIOS setting in the BIOS using Google. If your BIOS is not listed, then you need to return the BIOS and get a new one. If it is listed, you need to enable the secure boot option. This can be done using Settings. Replace the boot drive. Windbg. Since you are using Windows 8.1, it's likely that you have a UEFI based BIOS. The steps in this answer assume that you have a UEFI based BIOS. Once a hard disk is installed, WinDbg cannot be installed. You will have to find a method to install WinDbg offline. If WinDbg is installed to the hard disk, then you will have to format the hard disk and reinstall Windows. Download WinDbg. You can download WinDbg from the Developer Tools download page for Windows 8 and higher. Note that if you have a Windows 8.1 based computer, then you will have to manually download WinDbg (see the answer below). Install WinDbg. After installing WinDbg, launch WinDbg and open the WinDbg command prompt. You can find WinDbg by navigating to the WinDbg.dmp file in the install folder. Steps First, you need to make a copy of the existing.dmp file. This is shown in the following screenshot. If you don't have a.dmp file, then just use the following command to make a copy of the existing.dmp file. dmpblk create -f Next, you need
