At least the magic of Google allows us all to search for a bit of wisdom on this sort of thing for free. ~ ~ ~ icy That's a fair statement, but the article isn't really focused on "how" anything works, it's focused on the mindset and perspective. Texas Renews Efforts To Arrest Medical Marijuana Patients The state of Texas is gearing up to arrest all patients who benefit from the legal medical use of marijuana. The Texas Legislature is working on a crackdown on doctors, and has already passed laws allowing health care professionals to be fired for recommending medical marijuana. Drug possession for medical patients is still on the books, but authorities will make the arrest and prosecution stick. The Texas Medical Association and other organizations filed a lawsuit against Attorney General Greg Abbott in hopes of stopping the crackdown. Abbott said the intentions of the lawsuit were "purely political" and blamed the New York-based Drug Policy Alliance. "We're not trying to make life difficult for doctors, we're not trying to make life difficult for patients," Abbott said. "This is just a political stunt by a New York-based political group with no Texan interests." "Given the impending arrests, we are greatly concerned about the safety of patients, doctors, nurses, social workers, pharmacists, and others who could be arrested for aiding the use of medical marijuana," Jeffrey Lowell, executive director of the Drug Policy Alliance, said in a statement. However, Governor Abbott has Pep Guardiola believes Manchester City are equally adept at scoring goals from open play or from set pieces but that he would prefer not to rely on the latter in games at Old Trafford. Kevin De Bruyne has been the club's best player through two of their last three league games, including a stunning hat-trick against Chelsea, but Guardiola has admitted Pepismo training ground approach as championed by Nicky Butt. "If we have to play against a team where it is not possible to score goals from open play, we need to ask ourselves 'how do we score,'" he said on Tuesday evening. "The boys have had a very good last month.” Guardiola, who attended Malcolm Allison’s funeral on Monday, was given an emotional send-off by Allison’s son, Carlton. The City manager has also offered words of comfort to Diego Costa. This is not the first time Guardiola has been in the company of City’s greatest-ever player, following an emotional ceremony in the town of Focuzza, where Allison once grew up. “I feel honoured to be there,” he said. “He was my idol as a child. He was a wonderful person, a great coach. He was the
