Keymacro is an easy-to-use and very well documented software application that allows you to create and run macros (triggers) in a special.dot format file. Most often a macro is used in conjunction with a keystroke. Macros are used to automate various tasks, for instance typing a long report or simply submitting forms. For such an automation to work properly, the macros need to be easily manageable and not prone to errors. A window opens and shows you the options of the currently selected macro. The application is a cross

If you have no idea how to make a macro, just copy and paste the code. Then add a keystroke to the code and modify the variables as you like. Then you can run the macro. Keymacro can run from any drive or folder and also works when you don't have the program open. You may put it on a floppy, a CD, any removable media that contains dot files, and even in a memory card or external hard disk. USERLIST
