What if, in the year 50 C.E. and 100 years after, our civilization had to face the collapse of three countries? You are the last remaining human after this catastrophic event. The civilization is nothing but a big pile of ruins of the former bodies and huge amounts of dead bodies of the contemporary citizens. The so-called military forces are in complete chaos. The so-called police forces are also in disarray and hide in their hideouts. The mafia, mafia syndicates and other organized violent groups of criminals hide themselves from the law enforcement agencies. Some part of the so-called government is trying to cover up the disaster. But this government is only a shadow of its former self. Thus, only you are called to restore order in this difficult situation. The combat system of the game can be compared to the defense game. You hold a shield at the right time, block an enemy attack and counter-attack your enemy. You can also choose the character class. Most important, it is possible to engage in dialogues with the NPCs. To kill enemies, you have two weapons at your disposal. As you progress, you will gain the ability to arm yourself with new weapons and armors. You can protect yourself against enemies with armor. What's new in The Forgotten Ones:

The Forgotten Ones is a fantasy novel by American writer Michael Moorcock. The latest novel from Moorcock's New Worlds series, it was first published in October 1995 by Ace Books. Plot introduction The novel is set in a world of high technological advancement, in which magic has arisen several times during history. The basic plot follows the actions of Queen Termagant, a powerful enchantress who is seeking the overthrow of the current Emperor or Coringan, and his attempt to create a central machine of rule. The novel is partly a political satire on monarchs. Plot summary As World Three has a secret weapon of war the Emperor Coringan sends his inquisitors, the Treize, to find out how the weapon is being developed. The inquisitors come across an ancient portal under the city walls of Ardentia and the slave that man from it are tricked into selling to Grand Duke Richard for a higher price, ranging from 900 to 1500. Delineator Gregory, who is part of the inner circle of the inquisitors and is one the to overthrow Coringan and replace him with Queen Termagant, eventually seeks out the inquisition house where Baba Yaga lives. He is then invited by Baba Yaga to go to the castle of the Negus of the Saaur, who lives in an underwater fortress. Gregory meets the Negus but then the sorcerer can control the sea around his castle. Ultimately, Gregory "expose Baba Yaga" to the Negus, who gives him the task to open a gate into the otherworldly plains called the Realms. When he reaches the south edge of the Realms he meets a gale-born cat (which is later revealed to be a Clay Elf) and the nomadic Altars, creatures that protect the Realms. They introduce Gregory and Baba Yaga to form "the grey race", a cabal of mages that represent the powerful in the Realms. This is made up of the Mentor-Clay Elf, his Captain Blodwyn, his Hellborn Ally, Julius and Celia. This is later revealed in the ninth chapter The Mistress when it is revealed that there are seven members of the cabal. Gregory and Baba Yaga then embark upon a brief martial interlude with Genetrix Vizier Tantora, another ally. They successfully destroy an island of the emissaries of the Corbinite-Guild at the city of Shekkaya, on the frontier
