There are a number of presets you can apply to an image to change its appearance. These are great for quickly changing a photo to make it look different. Colour Space Colour Space is a pre-set that modifies the colours. It is great for creating a new colour scheme for an image. You can change the green/blue tonality and the greyscale values. You can also change the highlight and shadow ranges and the black/white point, and finally you can adjust the colour saturation and brightness. With a tweak of the settings you can create an image with a different colour and light scheme. Light and Dark

The Light and Dark pre-set changes the tonal range of an image. You can adjust the black/white point, greyscale value, highlight and shadow range and the colour saturation. This pre-set takes the image towards or away from a black-and-white photo. You can easily add some black and white to an image by using this pre-set. You will need to add a black layer below the photo to get the effect. Remove Color

The Remove Color pre-set removes all colour from an image. You can remove all colour from the image except grayscale colours, which is fantastic for black and white conversions.

Grayscale The Grayscale pre-set is designed for making a photo grayscale. The settings are the same as Colour Space but with a lower contrast, and the greyscale values are more subtle. This pre-set is perfect for making black and white conversions. How to install Photoshop Elements 2019 for free

Q: Returning a "Find Result" value I am fairly new to iOS development and I have an issue which should be simple to resolve, but I can not find a solution after a few hours of searching. I have an app which searches a database of training courses and returns a list of training courses available to be booked into. The database is currently in a JSON file, and I have managed to get the json data into a swift UITableViewController, which I can display in a table. The problem is that I can not figure out how to return a value of "0" if the database does not contain any results for that search term. My code looks like this: @IBOutlet var resultTable: UITableView! override func viewDidLoad() { super.viewDidLoad()

dataTable = [["Cars"],["Pl anes"],["Fishing Boats"]] //Unzip the file into an NSData instance let fileManager = NSFileMana ger defaultManager() let storeUrl = NSURL(string:
"") do { //Check if the file exists if!fileManager.fileEx

istsAtPath("List.json") { //This is the training data we want to extract, if it exists we should be good dataTable = [["Cars"],["Pl
anes"],["Fishing Boats"]] } else { let jsonData = NSData(contentsOfURL: storeUrl) //JSON is a format for data transfer between two devices self.currentText =

What's New in the?

According to Technori, a site-monitoring service provider that monitors more than two million websites, the number of recorded logins for sites dropped to 34.4 million from the 37.6 million recorded on March 19. The drop follows attempts by investigators in the United States to identify the people behind the hacking of the Sony Pictures server. The computer breach has triggered questions about the security of all the other companies and organizations that store confidential data online. Sony Chief Executive Kazuo Hirai warned in an early Friday morning press conference that the breach may have affected as many as one million customers, affecting their credit card information. The CEO said Sony was still investigating the possible financial impact of the attack. The Web attacks involved the hacking of Sony's web server, intruding into its network and copying massive amounts of data. Security experts said the attack was the largest of its kind and potentially more severe than the attack on Chinese websites that were at the center of an international dispute about cyber espionage. The Sony breach has led to speculation that one of the targets was the National Security Agency, and that the trojan virus that hackers used is a weapon designed specifically to attack the agency. In an April 1 post on a Chinese microblog, Anonymous, the hacker group best known for the denial-of-service attacks targeting government Web sites during the Arab Spring, urged the U.S. government to stop spying on the Chinese people. "We will definitely continue to fight the U.S. government with respect to their excesses. We urge other nations to start to do the same," the group said. "We are one, but our enemy is many. They are rich and we are poor. They have the best guns, and we have only rocks. Yet, we fight. Because we are one, our enemy is many. Thus, we fight because we are one, but our enemy is many." The group declined to offer a statement for this article, but many of its supporters on Twitter questioned whether Anonymous's denunciation of the NSA was more about winning attention than about continuing to fight the agency. Zhang Linsong, a professor at the University of Shanghai, said the apparent timing of the attack suggests it might be aimed at diverting attention from a possible cyber intrusion. "This probably could be an attempt to send a message to the U.S. government that they should not respond to any international criticism by accusing China of being behind the hacking
