"Songs In The Key Of Life" is a 14-track album from Elton John.Maruta algorithm In computer science, the Maruta algorithm is a method for detecting cliques. It is based on assigning each vertex v of a graph G to a component C, so that c and v are both adjacent to every vertex in C. The algorithm If the graph is undirected, then there are three choices of component assignment: Each vertex v is assigned to a component C to be adjacent to all vertices in C Each edge (u, v) is assigned to be adjacent to both u and v in the same component Each edge (u, v) is assigned to be adjacent to both u and v in separate components In graph G, let v be a vertex adjacent to vertices u and w. Then v is either assigned to C in only one of the three cases (the first or the third case) or it is assigned to C in all three cases. If it is assigned to a single component C, then it is a clique vertex in C; otherwise it is not. The algorithm for directed graphs is similar. Each edge is assigned to be adjacent to both the source and the target vertex of that edge. Vertices adjacent to all the vertices of a component C are called a component core of C. There is a growing concern about using cement for primary arthroplasty in young and active patients, for fear of inducing adverse reactions. Recent studies have questioned whether partial resurfacing (forsep) in the young can be as successful as total hip arthroplasty (THA). We analysed the clinical and functional outcome of 92 primary THAs, performed without cement, in 89 patients. At a mean follow-up of 4.7 years (2.6-6.1), 38 patients (42%) were retired and the overall patient satisfaction was 83%, showing equal clinical outcomes and satisfaction as in patients treated with primary THA using cement. Many neurodegenerative diseases, such as Alzheimer's disease, prion disease, Parkinson's disease, Huntington's disease, and others, are progressive neuronal cell death and impaired
