Anonymous Oplisrael Doser Flood is back with tons of targets and more than 200 domains and IP addresses targeted. Operation Doser has saved the day again on the afternoon of July 12 with a heavy hitting arsenal of attacks hitting a large number of targets. Anonymous Doser is an unofficial successor of Operation Payback. They have a presence on Twitter, YouTube, Facebook, Pixabay, GitHub and other places. This tool from Hacking Team is a web application firewall and allows to monitor the activity of web servers by displaying their statistical graphs. This tool is not used for a DDoS attack but can be used to discover what kind of attacks a given web server is susceptible to. You can download it from SourceForge. The PUNISH network is a tool built by Anonymous for external attackers that aims to keep the target's traffic from being redirected to the bad guy. It uses two basic components; 1) a proxy through which the target's traffic is redirected and 2) a honeypot (fake IP address) through which the bad guy's traffic is captured and monitored. To get the most out of this tool, the targeted IP address of the honeypot should be placed in a different subnet than the target's IP address. It is quite powerful and provides a fine-tuned control panel that can be used for ongoing attacks. An assessment by Securelist rated it as the most likely tool for DDoS attacks and recommended that "the specific parameters of the kill switch have to be tested with the attacker first". Visit Securelist for details. This DDoS tool from UDD-lab was built to be integrated into the bad guys' infrastructure, so it should be difficult to detect if it is being used against you. It is basically a standard HTTP/UDP flood, but you can control multiple computers or phone numbers behind the attacker. You can download it from SourceForge. 5ec8ef588b
