Bobby Shmurda Makes It Over 100M on “Baby Blue Rose” A hip-hop producer who ranks among the list of the best in his field — rapper Bobby V — has big aspirations for his producer/songwriter career. Producing, writing, and releasing his first full-length rap album entitled “Hip Hop Greenhouse” in 2017, Bobby V is now planning to cash out on one of the biggest Billboard hits of the year in “Baby Blue Rose.” As a popular song by the chart topping single act South Korean group BTS, the theme of “Baby Blue Rose” is very fitting for Bobby V who has been very eloquent when it comes to women. Be it his dual perspective in rapping “girl with the face” and later on “woman with the fix,” Bobby clearly wants to share much more on “Baby Blue Rose.” As a matter of fact, he has made his most profound statements on the now Billboard 100 hit song. On the intro of “Baby Blue Rose,” Bobby purports the struggle of many men faced with deciding between being a man or maintaining women. By making the statement that “someone told me there’s only one way to survive and that’s to be a man,” Bobby really wants to share his honest thoughts and true feelings on matters including a woman’s right to love. Bobby further drops solid cliché rhymes about women, like, “Baby doll, you think you got a story that it’s a good one?” Bobby even takes a swipe on the figure of Bette Midler as he spits: “Baby Doll, Bette, you on TV and you rhyiming for TV money?” Bobby V strikes gold at the song’s theme when he rhymes: “I sold my soul for a piece of someone’s hair,” and gives an interesting explanation on the occasion: “I’m mad at myself for who I really was / the same thing I said that old man said, you can’t change for a hat, but I did.” In another line of the hit song, Bobby expresses a desire to get “more than just a loving man” by using a term which translates to “cheap loving”: “I want more than just a loving was hiring an aide with links to Bashar Assad's Syrian regime. Andrew Murphy, a trade unionist and senior official for the Chemical Fuels Industry, has been accused of "appalling behaviour" and allowed his son-in-law to work for him after his company was named by the Labour MP Clare Short in the Commons. The veteran civil servant has been told he is being suspended amid an "independent investigation" by the company. It emerged last night it has also sacked two other officials in the same department who are, according to the Sunday Times, also accused of pro-Assad links. Mr Murphy's troubles began in 2005 when he employed Daniel Greenlees, then aged 21, as an assistant. According to an investigation by the MP, Mr Greenlees was paid around £400 a week. As a result, Mr Murphy was forced to sack him when Mr Greenlees was appointed press officer of the National Union of Railwaymen's old-fashioned transport committee.

Labour at the time said Mr Murphy, who was employed by the union's specialist industrial relations department, "was a senior figure in that office". Last year, Mr Greenlees was arrested on suspicion of supplying ecstasy. Despite this, he still worked for the union until 2010, when he was dismissed, according to the Sunday Times. British-born, Mr Greenlees was a St Mary's College student at Cambridge University where he read English. He later became the deputy director of the National Union's council-workers branch.
After his dismissal, he
