If I want to return some attribute from the object only then I use this >>> a = {'key1': 'value1', 'key2': 'value2', 'key3': 'value3'} >>> a {'key1': 'value1', 'key2': 'value2', 'key3': 'value3'} >>> a['key1'] 'value1' Now If I want to return it as a dictionary with the keys as the keys of the dictionary and the value as the attribute of the dictionary I would do this - >>> b = {'key1': 'value1', 'key2': 'value2', 'key3': 'value3'} >>> b {'key1': 'value1', 'key2': 'value2', 'key3': 'value3'} Now How do I combine them both so that I have the object as dictionary with the keys as the object keys and the attribute as the values? So if a is as per example: {'value1': a, 'value2': a, 'value3': a} So I can do: >>> import collections >>> col = collections.defaultdict(a) >>> col defaultdict({'key1': 'value1', 'key2': 'value2', 'key3': 'value3'}) Is there a neat way of doing that? Or an attribute on the dictionary that will be {'object key': 'attribute value'} instead of just {'object key': 'object value'}? A: Here's an approach that produces a single dictionary. The old dict.items method does the work here. d = {k:a.get(k) for k in a} d # {'key2': 'value2', 'key1': 'value1', 'key3': 'value3'} A: If all of your keys are guaranteed to be present in b, then a dict comprehension will do: {k:b[k] for k in b} This can also be

Microsoft Windows A software suite developed by Icom, Inc. for the IC-M710 radio, which was designed specifically for software developers. It is available for Windows and Android. If you have a mobile emulator for your handheld, you can download and run the app on it. The software is an integral part of the operating system on the handheld. It works as an operating system. It is a full featured software. A large part of the software is based on the GSM standard. In other words, the software needs to be connected to the phone network or connected to a laptop with a SIM-card so that it can check for the network configuration and automatically set itself for the country, etc.

What makes the software unique is that it can run on a laptop as well, and offers several methods for transferring settings, data, etc. The software is not designed for a typical end user.
