* Adobe Photoshop Elements: This is a popular standalone application that includes all of the features found in the full version of Photoshop. However, its price is much lower than that of Adobe Photoshop. * Adobe Photoshop Lightroom: This is the free program that can import and manage photos from your camera or a digital photo folder. This is extremely helpful in organizing images, and it adds a good deal of features to the simple editing tools found in other programs.

However, there are some other free online Photoshop alternatives that you can use to find the features you're looking for. These sites offer tools that are more powerful and easier to use than the free version of Photoshop. As of 2020, these are the best free online Photoshop alternatives. Online Photo Editing 1. Paint.net Paint.net is the old stand-by for hobbyists and the free version has a lot to offer. It is a good tool for editing images online, by anyone. It's perfect for getting quick and dirty edits or for creating GIFs from a single image. Paint.net is a vector graphics editor, which means that the user can manipulate the shapes of elements such as lines and curves while editing. This allows them to get the exact look they're going for without worrying about losing quality or accidentally changing things. The free version of Paint.net has many features included such as adjusting color, curves, and layers. This allows the user to perform quick and simple adjustments to photographs. It also includes features that allow the user to create and export GIFs, view brushes and layers, create a new document, browse the file system, and more. This is perfect for people looking to create and edit images online without having to worry about having a program with a huge learning curve. Paint.net is available for Windows, Mac, and Linux and is available at the Paint.net website. 2. Gimp Gimp is more than just an image editor. It is a graphics editor, which is a powerful and popular option for the more serious user. Gimp is arguably the most popular and well-known open-source image editor available today. Gimp is widely considered to be one of the best open-source alternatives to Photoshop. It has a simple user interface, which makes the editing process easy for all users. It is flexible and powerful enough to be a professional editing solution. Gimp has a lot of built-in filters and the ability to layer elements allows the user to edit every element. There are many tutorials, guides, and even books on using Gimp online to learn more about its advanced features. Gimp is available on the Gimp website for Windows and Mac and on the Linux website. 3. Q: Nifi - CSS import issue I am new to using Nifi, I am running a NiFi flow which has basic authentication to a webservice, I am using CSS to pass some additional information from the page to the webservice. I was sending that information via a GET request and that worked ok. However, now I need to add a CSS statement to a CSS file and add it to that flow. I am unsure how I would do this as the examples do not appear to cover this option. For example, this is what I have now: A: If you are using Apache Tomcat as NiFi uses, then here is how you can change the CSS file in tomcat. Create a Process-HTTP-Request property in your UpdateAttribute processor with the attributeName = HTTP_CSS_RENDERED and attributeType = AttributeValue. Then a replaceText processor that accepts the CSS stylesheet that you wish to display in the tomcat manager and change the HTML that you have in it and change the style in it. Make sure to use AttributeValue instead of AttributeValueType.AttributeValue Q: Include only the new data from a timeseries in a dataset I've got a temperature sensor that makes (roughly) 60Hz updates of a one-dimensional array of doubles. These updates are in fact the measurements of each of 60 instances of a specific sensor. Imagine this scenario: in a specific case, the device registers a situation where the sensor was off and hasn't registered a temperature value since the last update, and as a consequence, the sensor hasn't made a temperature update since the last update. In this situation, the sensor makes a lot of updates (probably more than 60) within a short period (maybe a few seconds) of time. How do I include in a dataset all the sensor data that was registered within this short period of time and exclude all the data registered outside this period? A: I came up with the solution I was looking for. I've used a Map, which allows me to not only get all the data from the sensor within a specific time interval, but also to filter it (by key). Then, I combined the filter results (each key representing a value) into a single array of doubles, which can be handed to a dataset. I don't know if this is the best way to do

Q: Forward engineering of Azure account from classic portal on premise Is it possible to use "Forward engineer" option on Azure portal to call an on-premise azure account? What I mean is, can I create a new Azure subscription on-premise, and call this new subscription from Azure portal? I want to bypass the limitation of creating account, storing account keys on-premise, etc. A: It is possible to forward engineer an on-premise subscription to a public Azure subscription. Go to the Azure portal Create an on-premise subscription by using your existing Azure subscription Call forward engineer from the new subscription P.S.: Both the above steps requires a subscription that you have permission to forward engineering into the new subscription. For example, if I am the owner of an on-premise subscription A, I can only forward engineer into a public Azure subscription called B, in which I have been granted access. In the on-premise subscription (subscription A), choose Forward engineering on the Overview blade. Choose Subscription B, and then click Continue. P.P.S.: I've never used Azure CLI for this task, so I can't be sure that you get permission to use this in your scenario. Q: Creating a Facebook Login button with LoginManager I'm trying to create a Login Button for Facebook for my Android App using the Login Manager. The idea is to open the Facebook App and ask the user if they want to give my app permissions to access Facebook data. After the user has accepted that, I would like to get back to my app. However I'm getting the following error android.content.ActivityNotFoundException: Unable to find explicit activity class {com.mbdev/com.facebook.widget.LoginButtonActivity}; have you declared this activity in your AndroidManifest.xml? My app Intent intent = new Intent(Intent.ACTION_VIEW, Uri.parse("")); startActivity(intent); The following attributes were also added to the LoginButton to enable the LoginManager
