The dorsoposterior hypothalamic nucleus (DPN) is located laterally to the anterior hypothalamic nucleus (AHN) in the brain of Aplysia. It has been shown that DPN neurons are inhibited by stimulating the AHN and participate in long-duration inhibition of locomotor activity. This study investigated the participation of the DPN in wheel-running activity. The abalimus nerve was microinjected with biotin dextran amine (BDA) to the AHN. The DPN neurons were identified with anti-PAP and identified on cross sections with an optical microscope. The DPN receives inhibitory (PAP+) and excitatory (PAP-) inputs from the AHN. In the DPN, BDA-labeled neurites were found in dorsolateral and medial zones of the nucleus. Inhibition was greater for the dorsal portion of the DPN than for the medial area. For a given level of inhibition in the DPN, the locomotor activity was decreased. These results indicate that the DPN participates in wheel-running activity by providing inhibitory pathways.Q: jQuery UI autocomplete giving me empty results in ASP.NET MVC Razor view I'm working with ASP.NET MVC 3 + jQuery UI.
