generals plays very differently from its sibling tiberium and red alert series. for instance, resources are no longer obtained from minerals scattered on the ground, but are instead collected at supply docks and supply stockpiles, and these resources, unlike ore or tiberium, are finite in quantity. units now possess special abilities aside from their primary functions, such as american vehicles being able to create hovering robotic drones to provide support, chinese hackers capable of shutting down buildings or providing a steady flow of funds, and the basic soldiers of all three factions being able to capture buildings, eliminating the previous method of using engineers (although the process of capturing buildings in generals is gradual rather than the instantaneous capture of previous games). perhaps the most distinctive difference in contrast to tiberium and red alert is that structures must be built using builder
