The target platform is Android for sure but I'd also like to have the same application in iOS and Mac. I'm programming in C# (WPF) and I want to know if there's a good framework to use. I've heard about MonoTouch, but I don't know whether is it still a strong framework for my purpose. I know iOS is based on.NET so it might be a good candidate. I'm asking this because I'd like to write the application in C# and don't know if the NET frameworks are available in Apple (although Microsoft should provide them). A: If you are already writing your application in C#, I would recommend you write in C#. Apple made the call to stay with Obj-C for at least another year or two. As far as the MonoTouch framework goes, it is far from clear what Microsoft's plans for.NET are in the long run, and whether it will be strong enough on 595f342e71
