When install- (and reinstall-)ing a package, dpkg -i --force-all will fail with:

dpkg: error processing package [mypackage] (--install): dependency problems - leaving unconfigured No apport report written because MaxReports is reached already dpkg: dependency problems prevent configuration of [mypackage] dpkg: error processing package [mypackage] (--configure): dependency problems - leaving unconfigured No apport report written because MaxReports is reached already Errors were encountered while processing: [mypackage] E: Sub-process /usr/bin/dpkg returned an error code (1) What happens behind the scene and what is the cause of the error? How can I know if my package has any dependency problems? A: dpkg -l shows the packages installed in the running system. To show the actual package status of any package whose status is unknown (since its installed or removed in the current system), use dpkg -s. In your case, you have to install the above package using -f option first. Installing the package once using -f option might find all the missing dependencies. Example: dpkg -i --
